Santa Barbara's Birthday

Santa Barbara is a sentimental city. We love to restore and preserve, remember and romanticize. This week we are celebrating the 196th anniversary of the founding of the city, and we like to reflect on how it all began.

The scene is a windswept patch of high ground near the present site of our downtown post office. Gathered for the occasion are Father Junipero Serra, Chief Yanonalit and a group of Canolino Indians, and Governor Felipe de Neve with a detachment of Spanish soldiers. The governor, Father Serra and the soldiers have come to Chief Yanonalit's village from the new San Buenaventura mission. They are about to establish the fourth royal Spanish presidio in Alta California.

The proceedings begin when the governor orders the soldiers to erect a large wooden cross in the area to be used for a chapel. When this is done, Father Serra, dressed in full pontificial vestments, blesses the site of the future presidio and celebrates Mass at the little brush altar which has been hastily constructed for the service.

Governor Neve then ceremoniously plants the royal standard of Spain beside the cross, formally establishing the Mission-Presidio of Santa Barbara. The following day, St. Joseph's Day, April 21, 1782, is chosen to be the official birthday of the town.

The location on this sweep of coastline inside the Santa Barbara Channel was selected by the Spanish for their final presidio in the New World because it was centrally situated in the area between the Monterey and San Diego presidios. The Santa Barbara garrison was organized to protect and govern the territory from what is now Santa Maria to the San Fernando Valley.

In the weeks following the ceremonial establishment of the Royal Presidio at Santa Barbara, soldiers continued to cut trees and brush for the presidio chapel, an adjoining hut to be used as a home for the priest, and barracks for the soldiers. Store houses, horse corrals and homes for married soldiers were also built, using the abundant brush and green wood. It was several years before construction of permanent buildings of stone, adobe and tile was begun.

Four artesian springs furnished sweet, clear water for the little fort, and some historians believe that these springs, located near the present intersection of Ortega and Garden Streets, determined the precise location of the fort and the pueblo that grew up around it. Garden Street was so named because it led from the Mission to the gardens and orchards which flourished near the Presidio springs.

A public ceremony in De la Guerra Plaza on Friday, April 21, opened this year's birthday week, which continues with events arranged by the Santa Barbara Historical Society, the Goleta Valley Historical Society, the Trust for Historic Preservation and the American Revolution Bicentennial Committee. The Historical Museum, 136 E. De la Guerra Street, is opening a special, month-long exhibit of Theresa Potter's oil paintings depicting the 1776 DeAnza expedition, which brought settlers from Mexico to California. Stow House and Horace A. Sexton Museum, 304 Los Carneros Road, Goleta, will welcome visitors Saturday and Sunday, April 22 and 23, from 2 to 4 p.m.; and Hope House, the restored home built by the founder of Hope Ranch, will have open house Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. The Caneda Adobe, 123 E. Canon Perdido Street, on the site of the future Presidio de Santa Barbara State Park, will be the scene of a members' reception and an exhibit of Bernice Adair's new sculpture of leading dowager and prime mover Dr. Pearl Chase on Sunday afternoon.

"Thus times do shift; each thing its turn does hold . . ." Happy Birthday, Santa Barbara!

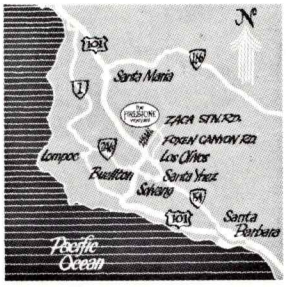
the FIRESTONE vineyard

Careful analysis of the potential for varietal grape vineyards in the Santa Ynez Valley showed excellent possibilities. A detailed study of The Firestone Vineyard area indicated that the soil, water, climate and all the other factors influencing the growth of fine wine grapes were favorable, and in 1972 the vineyards were planted.

Our grapes are Cabernet Sauvignon, Pinot Noir, Merlot, Riesling, Chardonnay and Gewurztraminer. These wines will be released according to the time each wine needs to reach full potential, and we hope they will add a positive and pleasurable dimension to the California wine scene.

To visit us, drive to Los Olivos, north of Santa Barbara, and turn east on Zaca Station Road just north of the junction of Highways 154 and 101. We are open to visitors from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily except Sundays. Phone 688-3940.



Wines available at the winery, retail wine stores and restaurants.
